Geeveston Child and Family Centre wayraparattee

Liminal Studio

The Geeveston Child and Family Centre wayraparattee is a modest project that has been designed with careful sensitivity to the needs of the local community. After extensive consultation, the architects have established a new and much-loved local heart, while keeping the centre's institutional roles at a comfortable domestic scale. As a result of their considered response to local forms and settings, the architects have made a significant contribution to the community. Their concern for enabling community ownership and identity, combined with smart planning of deceptive simplicity, deftly supports all the necessary functions of privacy, meetings, supervision and play.
